These are some of the most popular tourist destinations on the island, due to their historical significance as well as their natural splendor.

Port Blair

Port Blair, the main city of the Andaman Islands, is your gateway to the Islands' vast expanse of Beauty and Serenity. Explore its numerous museums, learn about the Flora and Fauna, and the thriving marine life, or simply wander around the Marina Park and soak in the wonderful sea breeze. Stroll past Japanese bunkers, participate in water sports, explore the island's high peaks, and become acquainted with the land's thriving culture and diversity.

Best Time to Visit Port Blair

- The tourist season runs from November to mid-May, with the peak season being from December to March.
- During the months of June through September, the monsoon rains fall.
- Because it is a tropical island, one should always anticipate modest rainfall during other seasons.

Havelock Island

Havelock Island (New Official Name: Swaraj Dweep), the most famous tourist destination, is located around 70 kilometers north of Port Blair. Swaraj Dweep (Havelock Island) is home to white-sand beaches, turquoise oceans, and some of the continent's greatest diving.

Havelock (Swaraj) is well-known for being a traveler's paradise. Relax on its isolated beaches or explore its lush and tranquil mangroves; scuba dive among unique corals or go out on lengthy Jungle Treks — Havelock has it all!

When is the best time to visit Swaraj Dweep? (Havelock)

The tourist season runs from November to mid-May, with the peak season occurring from December to March. During the months of June through September, the monsoon rains fall. Because it is a tropical island, one should always anticipate modest rainfall during other seasons. Due to low tides and improved visibility, February and March are considered the finest months for water activities.

Neil Island

Neil Island is ideal for a relaxing getaway due to its spectacular biodiversity, untouched coral reefs, white-sand beaches, and tropical woods.

This island is only 13.7 square kilometers in size. Neil may be easily ridden about on a bicycle because of the flat terrain and compact size. The island's laid-back ambiance and clear appeal set it apart from nearby Havelock.

Neil Island is ideal for visitors looking to unwind on long, uninhabited beaches. With minimal activity, few resorts, and less bustle, this island is ideal for visitors looking to explore the island's communities.

Spend quality time at the named after legendary heroes from the Ramayana or indulge in water sports in the crystal blue sea — Neil Island is the rustic masterpiece of the Andaman Islands.

How to Get There - Ferry & Helicopter

Neil Island is only accessible via ferry from Port Blair. This island is connected to Port Blair and other adjacent islands through both government and private ships. The most convenient mode of transport is via a private ferry. The majority of tickets on government boats are allocated for island residents, and with no option for online booking, it is quite improbable that you would obtain a guaranteed ticket. To ensure a stress-free travel experience, it is advised that you purchase your tickets online and in advance to avoid the last-minute rush.

Baratang Island

Baratang is renowned for its natural features, which range from magnificent limestone caves to lush mangrove creeks. There are tidal swamp woods and intriguing Mud Volcanoes. It is the capital city's initial entrance north, positioned between the Middle and South Andaman Seas. Due to its proximity to Port Blair (about 100 kilometers), it is a popular one-day travel location, particularly for those with limited time.
