Dark Crusade mod Dark Crusade, a sequel to the original Dawn of War, was announced in January 2008, to be developed by Relic Entertainment. A pre-alpha demo of the game was released in June 2008, along with footage of the newly designed models. The game is scheduled for release on March 12, 2010. A trailer for the game, taken from the demo, was released on May 11, 2010. On January 5, 2009, Relic Entertainment released the first public gameplay video, depicting the game's new commanders and infantry units. A playable demo of the game was released on March 18, 2009. The demo allows the player to play as the Space Marine Acolytes, the Imperial Knights and the Dark Eldar Gargoyles. The game features three skirmish maps (the Ork homeworld, Ulthwe and the Ork-controlled Eye of the Vortex), one multiplayer map, the first mission of the single-player campaign (Mission 1: The Siege of Ulthwé), and two units: the Chapter Master Chapter Commander (the unit of the Space Marines) and the Gargoyle, the Chaos Space Marine flyer. On May 19, 2009, a free patch for the release version of the game, including the first mission of the game's single-player campaign, the "The Generals Assault" mission, was released by the developer. The patch makes notable changes such as the addition of five new multiplayer maps (the Ark, Ulthwé, Blood-Soaked Savannah, Keepsake and Docking Station), and the development of new Chaos Marine Death Squad, Death Lord and Chaos Knight models and vehicles. The patch also included the first release of two Space Marine Assault Squads (Gargoyle Squadron and Mordchar's Man-Ape Squad), and the new Chaos Space Marine Assault Squad for the Dark Eldar. The first trailer for the game was released on June 9, 2009. The game was delayed from its original release date to December 7, 2009. The game was released on December 7, 2009, for PC and Mac,
