Ok, this is from the Summit and I am at the Base Camp. This is a beautiful route and it is quite long. No route to Everest is truly long, but this one is really long. We start to climb at 6 am, every day, and I have to tell you that we have a really special view of the world. People are surprised to see how thin the air is in the Himalayas. How can the top of the world have air like that? We go above 15,000 meters, and when we see the first snow fall, it is not white, it is grey. We start to climb the Western Cwm, the hardest part of the route, and the first view of K2 is incredible. And then we go down to the other side of Everest, and finally get to the last pass. The monastery is built on the high ridge and we get a view of K2. The monastery is called Tengboche. We have to go through a narrow path, and finally, at the entrance, there is a special prayer room, where the lamas pray, and I have to tell you that the view of K2 is unique. It is really like a gigantic rock. And I have to tell you that the view of Tengboche monastery is also amazing. It is small, but it is really well designed and constructed. I hope that this video may help you to learn something new about Himalayas, and I hope you enjoy this video.
