Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a new process for the preparation of a hydrolysis product of a copolymer of an ester of acrylic acid with acrylic acid, an ester of methacrylic acid with methacrylic acid or an ester of itaconic acid with itaconic acid, said copolymer being the reaction product of hydroxy-alkyl esters of acrylic or methacrylic acid and an aliphatic dicarboxylic acid, and of the esters of methacrylic or itaconic acid with an alpha-olefin or of the ester of itaconic acid with an olefin of the diolefin type. This new process is of particular importance in the chemistry of polyesters, for example of those capable of being converted into fibers by the melt spinning technique or those which can be converted into moldings by the polymer injection technique. In particular, the invention relates to a process for the preparation of a hydrolysis product of a copolymer of an ester of acrylic acid with acrylic acid, of the esters of methacrylic acid with methacrylic acid or of the esters of itaconic acid with itaconic acid, said copolymer being the reaction product of hydroxy-alkyl esters of acrylic or methacrylic acid and an aliphatic dicarboxylic acid, and of the esters of methacrylic or itaconic acid with an alpha-olefin or of the ester of itaconic acid with an olefin of the diolefin type, wherein a copolymer which comprises repeat units derived from the acrylic acid or methacrylic acid ester, preferably in the case of
