Bank of Canada to allow $40 billion worth of additional yuan loans 1 Min Read TORONTO, July 18 (Reuters) - The Bank of Canada plans to raise its balance sheet by about $40 billion (U.S.) by allowing banks to extend $40 billion in new loans to their customers in the country's biggest non-interest rate stimulus to date, the Canadian lender said in a statement on Tuesday. The Bank of Canada said in its second-quarter monetary policy report it would continue to "stimulate the economy" by buying $60 billion of securities, including corporate debt, government bonds and mortgage-backed securities.
