Q: Rerender using jQuery after Ajax Request (with new JSON data) I am using Bootstrap and have set the mobile navigation links to display on desktop size and change it back to display on mobile. It's working like a dream and I'm happy. The problem is that I have to reload the page when I navigate to the home screen of the Bootstrap mobile nav but also the links on the page should change after the ajax request completes and the new data is populated. I know I need to use jQuery to rerender the page and I have tried the following: `jQuery('body').on('click', 'a[href*="www.yoursite.com/"]', function(event){ var data = $(this).attr('data-route'); if(data){ data = data.replace('www.yoursite.com/', ''); window.location.replace(data); } event.preventDefault(); });` and `jQuery(document).ready(function() { jQuery("body").on('click', 'a[href*="www.yoursite.com/"]', function(event){ event.preventDefault(); }); });` But these just reload the page after the ajax request. I need to find a way of rerendering the page and updating the content. A: Try this one: `jQuery('body').on('click', 'a[href*="www.yoursite.com/"]', function(event){ event.preventDefault(); var data = $(this).attr('data-route'); if(data){ data = data.replace('www.yoursite.com/', ''); window.location.replace(data); } });` If it's not working check the following: you placed the script tag above the html tag you have done the above code inside a `document.ready` callback function See this fiddle:
