Platelet-rich plasma (PRP) is a new biological material and widely used for the treatment of musculoskeletal lesions in regenerative medicine. In this study, we aimed to investigate the effects of PRP in the treatment of venous ulcers. Twenty-three patients with venous ulcers were enrolled. PRP was prepared using a single-stage centrifugation method and was used in the ulcers. In the first injection, 30 ml of the PRP was administered at one time and then, 10 ml of the PRP was applied every two weeks. During the treatment, clinical evaluations were performed by the ulcer area, pain intensity, and dressing changes, and changes in the ulcer area were measured. At week 8, the mean ulcer area significantly decreased in the PRP group (10.35+/-2.25 cm<sup>2</sup>) compared to the control group (16.11+/-5.69 cm<sup>2</sup>; p=0.006). In the PRP group, the ulcer area also decreased significantly compared to that at baseline (13.23+/-5.56 cm<sup>2</sup>; p=0.008). In addition, pain intensity and the number of dressing changes did not differ significantly between the two groups. These findings suggest that PRP may be useful in the treatment of venous ulcers
