But for the last few years, you've had to manually do this and if you use more than one Google account, you'd have to remember that all of them should use this feature. Now, Google is bringing revisions to Google Docs. The feature is available now to Gmail users (you can tell if you're one of them by looking at the little box that says "This account is using Gmail") and we expect that Docs users will soon be able to enjoy this feature as well. Revisions should look and behave just like regular edits to your document. In fact, the new feature works in a similar way to how Google Keep works.
