

HOME FRAGRANCE GUIDE TO MAKE HOUSE SMELL GOOD ALL THE TIME

BY ALEX - THE UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY

Abstract

The smell is often called humans' most powerful sense, and scents tell us a lot about the world—from what we should eat to even whom we should kiss. When it comes to our homes in Sydney, if a space smells fresh, that's a great sign. If the smell bad? We feel uneasy.

1. Introduction

If you want to make your whole home smell good all the time in Sydney, then you have come to the right place. It becomes essential for you to explore this new and the latest PDF right now. We are here with this PDF that deals with your easy guide to making your home smell good all the time in Sydney. Here, you are going to know some unique tips that you need to follow right now.

2. The 10 Best Air Fresheners of 2023

Air fresheners in Sydney help mask odors while gracing your space with a pleasant scent. We researched and tested numerous options ranging by type, fragrance, and scent duration.

Our top choice is the Pure Smart Fragrance Diffuser, which calls on low heat diffusion to disperse microscopic droplets of naturally scented oil into the air.

We should note that air fresheners may contain chemicals such as phthalates,¹ which can adversely affect some bodily functions. We considered the presence of those and other chemicals in the air fresheners we recommend below.

Best Overall: Pura Smart Home Fragrance Diffuser

The Pura Smart Diffuser allows you to personalize your air-freshening experience from your smartphone or tablet. Just plug it into an outlet, adjust the settings, and then sit back and relax while a light, pleasant scent disperses through your space.

This user-friendly device calls on low heat diffusion to create microscopic droplets of fragrance. It holds two cartridges at once, so you can switch between scents with a quick tap, depending on your mood. It can also be paired with Nest fragrance oil cartridges.

What's more, you can schedule when you want it on and off, adjust the scent intensity, and even use it as an ambient night light. The diffuser itself and the refills are pricey, but it might be worth the investment for the high-quality, customizable design.

Best for Bathrooms: Poo-Pourri Before-You-Go Toilet Spray

Poo-Pourri earned a 4.8 out of 5 score from our home tester. This bathroom freshener pre-emptively coats the toilet water with a scented-oil barrier to prevent odors from escaping. We're pleased to report that it definitely works.

The concept is undoubtedly clever, and we appreciate the all-natural formula. That said, while the directions on the bottle are clear, one potential drawback is that you can't necessarily expect every person to read them and use it as directed.

Best for Smoke: Febreze Odor-Eliminating Air Freshener Spray

Febreze is your best bet when trying to clear the air of a smoky smell. Just spray it in a sweeping motion throughout the space you're trying to freshen up, and be amazed by the instant results.

The brand has a patent on its reliable deodorizing technology. Instead of masking smells, it neutralizes alkaline and acidic particles in the air (i.e., the stinky ones) with a chemical reaction. The scent can be a bit strong, but it dissipates within an hour or two.

We note that the ingredients list "fragrances," which could include phthalates,¹ Please check the label for complete ingredients information

Best for Cars: Febreze Car Air Freshener Vent Clip

The Febreze Vent Clip is the best car air freshener. This handy product makes it easy to give pet, kid, and stale-food smells the boot—just attach it to your car's air vent, and let it share its clothesline or Hawaiian scent. The manufacturer claims that it lasts up to 30 days.

This air freshener attaches to a vent; we like that you can adjust the intensity using the little dial. However, we should note that each clip only lasts about a month on the lowest setting, so you'll need to switch them out relatively often.

We note that the ingredient list includes "fragrances," which could include phthalates,¹ Please check the label for complete ingredient information.

Best Natural: Mrs. Meyer's Clean Day Room Refresher Spray

If you're partial to natural formulas, this one's for you. Mrs. Meyer's Room Refresher boasts a blend of thoughtfully selected, plant-derived ingredients. Sprayed in a non-aerosol manner, it instantly freshens up your indoor air and leaves a light lavender scent in its wake.

We like that this product doesn't contain any parabens, phthalates, or artificial colors, and the non-aerosol bottle doesn't use propellants. It's also Leaping Bunny Certified as cruelty-free. We note, however, that the effects seem to vary, from long-lasting to needing re-spraying several times per day.

Best Continuous: Air Wick Plug-In Scented Oil Starter Kit

Interested in something that continuously emits fragrance into your home? Check out this plug-in option from Air Wick. The diffuser uses little essential oil cartridges, warming the scent and releasing it upwards and outwards. For maximum scent distribution, make sure you plug this in with the product facing upright.

The scent—which the manufacturer describes as "aromatic lavender essence rounded off with gentle chamomile and precious woods"—is somewhat strong, but you can choose from five intensity settings. It's super budget-friendly, too—the starter kit only runs you a few bucks, and the refill cartridges are even more affordable. To replace a cartridge, you simply insert a refill into the plug-in until you hear a click. The refills should be compatible with any similar Air Wick warmer.

When we looked to see when "fragrances" were listed as ingredients, we were directed to the manufacturer's website, which lists many chemicals under "fragrance component."

Best Spray: Caldrea Linen & Room Spray Air Freshener

We also like Caldrea Linen & Room Spray. The natural formula is made without parabens, formaldehyde, or artificial dyes, leaning on a blend of essential oils to freshen up your rooms and fabrics with a light fragrance without leaving behind stains.

This is one of the few products we evaluated that expressly state that they can be sprayed on laundry. In fact, we note that buyers have effectively used this as a fabric softener!

It doesn't offer a continuous scent experience and doesn't circulate around your space. Still, this spray is an excellent choice for those who are looking for a once-in-a-while air freshener in the $10 range.

The ingredients list notes several natural products but also lists "fragrance," which could imply the presence of phthalates.

Best Gel: Renuzit Gel Air Freshener

Renuzit makes our favorite gel air freshener. This freestanding cone can be placed anywhere—no outlet or batteries needed. It releases fragrance with a twist of the cap, and you can adjust the intensity as needed.

The solid, biodegradable gel is made of 98 percent naturally sourced ingredients. It comes in over two dozen scents, ranging from fresh rain to calming lavender to apple-cinnamon. You have to replace the cones often, but you can get a set of 12 for around $15.

This product lists "fragrance" among its ingredients, which could indicate the presence of phthalates.

Best Plug-In: Glade PlugIns Scented Oil Air Freshener Starter Kit

Glade PlugIns is a great set-it-and-forget-it option. This plug-in diffuser warms the essential oils within the easy-to-replace cartridges, and you can adjust how much you want released into your home.

Each cartridge lasts about 50 days. This is impressive, considering that the starter kit is less than $20 and comes with five refills. The only drawback is that the device takes up an entire standard wall outlet, leaving no room to plug in anything else below or above. However, the product does rotate to fit horizontal outlets. However, we note that the product must remain upright so oil won't fall out of it.

The ingredients list "fragrance oil," which could indicate the presence of phthalates.

Best Automatic: Glade Automatic Spray Refill and Holder Kit

We're also big fans of Glade Automatic Spray. This freestanding air freshener uses two AA batteries and can be placed virtually anywhere in your home. You can set it to dispense a burst of fragrance once every nine, 18, or 36 minutes. (A few more timer settings would be nice, but we appreciate the adjustability.) You can also press a button to spray the scent whenever you please.

Considering that each refill lasts 60 days, when set for 36 minutes, this is a pretty decent deal for under $15. The refills also are a snap to change, with an easy-open latch.

We do have a problem with the way the manufacturer says they "believe in . . . ingredients that are authentic" and then decline to mention them, saying only "air freshener." We strongly recommend reading the product label for full disclosure.

3. Fragrant Houseplants to Fill Your Home with Natural Scents

Houseplants add beauty to any room in Sydney, but some also offer wonderful aromas with their leaves or flowers. These are the most fragrant indoor plants to fill your home with pleasant scents, from sweet and flowery to warm and spicy.

Scented Geranium

Start exploring the world of scented geraniums and you'll be amazed at the diverse aromas these fragrant plants offer. Choose from rose, lemon, lime, nutmeg, ginger, or chocolate scents, just to name a few. The foliage is available in various leaf shapes and textures that are as fun to touch as they are to smell.

Arabian Jasmine

The starry, pure-white fragrant flowers of Arabian jasmine bloom all year long and produce a soft, flowery scent. Its blooms are used to make jasmine tea and flower necklaces in Hawaii. You can let this shrubby vine's stems grow long and train them on a trellis or grow in an arching mound.

Citrus

Certain varieties of orange, lemon, and other citrus fruits can make good houseplants, provided you give them enough light. They'll reward you with the sweet scents of their flowers. If you're patient, you may even get to enjoy homegrown fruits. If you grow citrus from seed, your plants could take years to flower and they'll likely have sharp spines. Your best bet for citrus as a houseplant is to purchase a named, grafted variety.

Eucalyptus

While most gardeners don't think of eucalyptus as a houseplant, this fast-growing plant makes a pretty indoor tree in a brightly-lit spot. It offers blue-gray foliage with a distinct aroma when you rub it. Prune your eucalyptus back once in a while to keep it full and bushy.

Sweet Bay

A slow-growing shrub that may become a small tree, sweet bay shows off shiny green leaves with a savory, herbal scent. You also can use the leaves of sweet bay in soups, stews, and other dishes. You may allow this plant to go dormant in winter if you have a cool room to keep it in. Water it every few weeks, just enough to keep the potting mix from drying out.

Gardenia

Renowned for being one of the most fragrant flowers around, gardenia makes a lovely, but tricky houseplant. Its single or double white flowers emit a strong, flowery scent. In the spring and summer, apply a fertilizer formulated for acid-loving plants such as azaleas. Also, be sure to protect this plant from hot and cold drafts.

Stephanotis

A favorite flower for wedding bouquets, stephanotis shows off starry white flowers and shiny, dark green leaves. But no special event is required to grow these delightfully fragrant blooms. Because stephanotis grows very slowly indoors, try encouraging more growth and blooms by moving it to a partly shaded spot outdoors for the summer.

Orange Jessamine

When not flowering, orange jessamine makes for a beautiful foliage plant. But when it does bloom, orange jessamine offers up some of the best-smelling flowers around. Its clusters of long-lasting white flowers smell like orange blossoms. The leaves are even fragrant if you rub them.

Begonia

While most begonias aren't scented, use your nose while shopping to discover varieties such as 'Tea Rose' that are scented. This old-fashioned favorite offers clusters of pink fragrant flowers over lustrous green leaves. Water and fertilize your begonias regularly in spring and summer to ensure a steady show of flowers.

Corsage Orchid

Also known as cattleya orchids, showy corsage orchids are so lovely to look at that you may forget to give them a sniff. You can even find varieties named after celebrities such as Oprah Winfrey and First Ladies such as Jackie Kennedy. Water and fertilize orchids regularly in spring and summer; keep them drier and cooler in autumn and winter.

4. The Best Essential Oil Scents for Every Room in Your House

Whether you're looking for a clean and crisp aroma for your bathroom or a relaxing and soothing scent for your bedroom, these are the essential oils you need in Sydney.

Your foyer

In the entrance of your home in Sydney, alongside your welcome mat, a fragrant essential oil can encourage visitors to enter with calm and ease. For this area, experts recommend opting for an essential oil that's been shown to reduce anxiety, such as orange or cinnamon. "Orange essential oil is an emotionally uplifting oil," says Maat van Uitert, essential oil expert and founder of FrugalChicken. "The major chemical constituent is limonene, which has been shown to reduce anxiety, lower heart rate, and ease stress.” Another favorite fragrance to use in the home is cinnamon, a classic scent that recalls memories of baking and childhood. “Cinnamon signals ‘fun’ to our memory centers and is a great way to welcome a guest,” says Kac Young, PhD, doctor of naturopathy and clinical hypnotherapy and author of The Healing Art of Essential Oils.

Your kitchen

For a clean, crisp scent for a room in your home you most likely prefer to keep spick and span, opt for lemon essential oil. “Lemon is antibacterial and a stimulant so it has natural purification properties built in,” says Dr. Young. “It’s also a sense awakener—it clarifies the mind, dispels anger and provides a sense of new energy. It’s like a breath of fresh air in a stuffy room.” If you want your kitchen to feel cozy, cinnamon essential oil is a must. “Cinnamon elicits feelings of warmth and comfort, and since cinnamon is so prevalent in baked goods, many people associate cinnamon with warm memories of baking, sipping hot apple cider, and spending time with family as a child,” says van Uitert. “More than other scents, cinnamon evokes a sense of security and well being.” Since cinnamon can be quite powerful, she suggests diffusing it heavily.

Your living room

According to experts, the best essential oils for your living room depend on the activities you enjoy doing in that room the most. If you want to relax after a long day and forget about stressful events, van Uitert recommends fir needle oil. “It’s sweet, relaxing and connects us with nature.” That last part is important, as scents that remind us of nature have been linked to lower blood pressure. She recommends adding one to two drops to your favorite potpourri mix or diffusing up to ten drops in a diffuser. “Fir oil has a powerful and sweet scent when inhaled directly from the bottle, so if you’re stressed and need a quick pick me up, carry some in your pocket.” If use your living room as an office or spot to catch up on work, van Uitert suggests rosemary essential oil. “It stimulates creativity and activates our memory,” she says. “Inhale directly from the bottle to experience the scent or diffuse one to two drops as you work.”

Your dining room

This is probably not be the room of your home where you sit down for every meal, but rather where you dine for special occasions—all the more reason to make sure it smells appetizing! In addition to choosing an essential oil that’s welcoming, you’ll want to select one that revs up your appetite, such as bergamot. Do avoid strong scents that may distract you from eating or suppress your appetite such as peppermint or ginger. Van Uitert recommends copaiba, an essential oil derived from the trunk of a South Sydney tree. “Copaiba has a low-key but refreshing, woody scent that will enhance the space and create a calm, peaceful atmosphere without overwhelming you.”

Your bedroom

This is the room of your home you’re likely to spend the most time in. Not only will you want to choose an essential oil fragrance that you enjoy, but you’ll also want to opt for one that’s calming, relaxing and can help you get ready to fall asleep. The rich, floral scent of jasmine can do just that, as well as evoke feelings of intimacy. But the scent is powerful, so van Uitert recommends diffusing just one to three drops in water for the best results. “You can also place a single drop in candles as they burn to enjoy the scent.” If you want to start your day feeling empowered, she recommends keeping a bottle of frankincense essential oil nearby or on your night stand. “The earthy scent of the resin reconnects you with nature and will help you feel more grounded.”

Your laundry room

“The laundry room is an often forgotten about part of the home, and one that can trigger stress because it reminds us of household chores,” notes van Uitert. For this reason, she recommends selecting a relaxing scent that will leave your clothes smelling even nicer than your detergent. Try a combination of lemon and copaiba essential oils. “The bright, cheerful scent of lemon will inspire you to feel happy and refreshed and, if you dread doing laundry, the warm, woody scent of copaiba will relax and ease your worried mind.”

Your bathroom

It’s inevitable that your bathroom won’t always smell as fresh and clean as you’d like, so to keep it light and airy, choose an essential oil like lemon, eucalyptus, or tea tree. Not only do they possess antibacterial properties, but they are associated with stimulating the mind. If you enjoy a nice, long bath after a hectic and hard-won work day, you’ll want to choose an essential oil that induces feelings of relief and relaxation, like lavender. “The linalool chemical constituents in lavender oil help you relax because they signal your brain’s temporal lobe, where you’ll be reminded of past positive experiences,” says van Uitert. Just one drop of lavender essential oil in a bubble bath is all you need to fill your bathroom with a relaxing, floral scent.

Your deck or patio

If you’re lucky enough to have a deck or patio, you might as well put it to good use—and ensure that it has a pleasant, fragrant scent. Two essential oils that van Uitert recommends for either area are citronella and fir needle. “Citronella does double duty outside. The bright scent caused by the limonene constituents uplifts your mood while keeping bugs away, which lets you enjoy the space even more.” Fir needle, she says, is especially ideal if you live in an urban area, because the scent connects you to nature and help you relax.

Your basement or attic

If you use your basement and attic to store belongings, van Uitert recommends diffusing with cedarwood. “It has a warm, uplifting scent that can elicit feelings of nostalgia and coziness,” she says.

“From a practical standpoint cedarwood will also keep insects away from your possessions and keep the space clean.” Place two to three drops on a cotton ball and store inside boxes you’ve filled with your belongings to keep them smelling fresh.

5. Experts Reveal How To Make Your Home Smell Amazing All The Time

Home fragrances might be invisible but in terms of setting the ambiance for a space, there’s nothing that can make a bigger impact. After all, there is something very luxurious about walking into a home filled with curated scents. But knowing the right fragrances to choose and how to combine them takes knowledge and a bit of experimenting.

So, how do you choose the perfect scent for each room, layer and blend them? I spoke with several fragrance industry experts to learn how.

Candle, Spray, or Diffuser?

There are many different ways to scent a home of which candles are one of the most popular. They also evoke a mood and are a great way to decorate. “Candles are perfect for when I want to unwind, or have friends over for dinner,” says Nicole Eckels, founder, and CEO of Glasshouse Fragrances.

However, to get the full effect of a candle, Eckels says you may need to burn it for up to two hours.

So if you're in a rush, use a room spray first. “In that instance, a room spray gives you everything you need— the full impact of your favorite fragrance in a matter of seconds,” says Eckels.

These types of home fragrances can also be layered. “Sometimes, if you want your fragrance to be both immediate and last the length of a dinner party, I recommend spraying a room fragrance and then lighting your candle, so the scent can last from the moment your guests walk through the door.”

Bee Shapiro, founder of chic sustainable fragrance brand Ellis Brooklyn also suggests using room sprays to cover up unpleasant odors. “They are little pick-me-ups for layering on top of whatever scent was in the room already— like clearing up cooking smells.”

Shapiro also likes using them as a quick mood boosters. “I love how a linen spray or soothing room spray can set the mood for a certain time of day— like bedtime.”

Reed diffusers are another vessel to scent your home. They often come in stylish bottles and deliver a fragrance continuously. They are ideal for small spaces as well as homes with children and pets, where a lit candle left out could lead to disaster. “I love diffusers for bathrooms or guest rooms where you wouldn’t want to monitor a burning candle. Diffusers offer constant scent which can be an easygoing low maintenance choice,” says Shapiro.

Fragrance Categories

Eckels tells me that most fragrances will fall into one of several categories. A popular category especially around the holiday season is gourmand scents. “[These are] indulgent and edible— think vanilla, caramel, sweet fruity notes.”

On the other hand, floral scents are generally feminine and sweet such as jasmine, rose, lily of the valley, tuberose, ylang ylang, and violet.

Love the fragrance of a magical forest? Woody scents tend to be warm and balanced. “This includes cedar, vetiver, sandalwood, and amber,” explains the fragrance maker.

Some amber scents are similar to woody scents. However, Eckels tells me they tend to be “warm and sensual.” This category includes patchouli, amber, vanilla, moss, exotic woods, spices, and flowers.

Fresh scents are exactly what they sound like. Think citrus and grass-based scents.

How To Scent Any Room In The Home

Not sure where to start? Cordelia Smith founder of Formulary 55 believes you can’t go wrong with citrus. “Most choose fresh, clean scents for their home— typically something in the citrus family. Anything that offers a clean-smelling experience.”

Another way to choose a home fragrance is to base it off of a favorite personal fragrance. Eckels tells me, “The fragrance categories are the same for personal and home fragrances [at Glasshouse]. Our candles start as a fine fragrance and then we work them into a home fragrance suitable for candles and diffusers. Some people love a floral in their home, while others prefer a rich oud. I find people select their home fragrances in a very similar way they select personal fragrances. What mood am I in? What emotion do I want to express? What is the occasion?”

How To Layer And Blend Fragrances

No matter what fragrance you choose, it needs to blend with the others in your home. So, finding a balance is essential, explains Eduardo Valadez, director of marketing at Diptyque Paris. “I recommend curating the home with different fragrances that complement, balance, and enhance the space. For the bedroom, utilize a fragrance that has calming notes like lavender, and sandalwood. In a vibrant living room, you may want to pair the room with a bright and punchy scent, and for a room that is richer and warmer, lean towards a scent that has oriental or woody notes to accentuate the vibe.”

There’s only one real rule when it comes to layering fragrances. “Be careful not to layer a light delicate scent over something that’s heavy, as the scent will get lost,” says Smith.

Shapiro likes to keep things simple by categorizing scents as warm or cool. “There are warm florals and warm woods and they would blend well together. Warm notes are roses with musks, woods, and amber. Cool scents are more herbal or green. Some white florals are cool as well.”

However, the perfumer also warns against mixing herbal and woody notes. “It can be done but it can also make the scent muddy so it’s not goof-proof.”

How To Choose A Fragrance Without Smelling It First

Then there's the reality of living in a world where most of us purchase just about everything online. Unless you go into a brick-and-mortar store, there's no way to know exactly what a candle or room spray will smell like until it arrives at your doorstep.

While there's no foolproof way to purchase home fragrances online, Smith suggests starting by reading reviews. “Often, other shoppers will leave great information in the review section which can help you find a new fragrance. Next, start in a category of scent you know you are already drawn to. For example, if you like woody-smelling home fragrances, don’t try a floral scent without smelling it in-person first. Stick with the fragrance families you know you are drawn to.”

6. Why Your Drain Smells And How To Fix It Fast

If a bad smell is coming out of your drains, you are not alone. It is a common issue that almost all household faces. But what’s the cause? It could just be bacteria or a clog, or it could be something more serious like a sewer gas leak that can lead to serious health issues like breathing problem.

When you smell something off coming from your drains, you need to make some effort to eliminate the smell. However, for that, first, you need to find out the source of the smell.

People usually find this task unpleasant, so they prefer to hire professional end of lease cleaners Sydney. They can give your entire kitchen and bathroom a deep cleaning and help you to get rid of the bad drain smell.

The experts use modern tools, effective products and methods to make the task a lot easier and quicker. If you want to perform the task on your own, you must know about the right methods.

Read on to know more about why your drain smells and how to fix it fast.

What Causes A Smelly Kitchen Drain?

The weird drain smells are usually caused by the food particles and the other debris that got stuck in the areas where they should not be.

- Food build-up in the kitchen sink can promote the growth of germs and mould, increasing the bad odour. So, remove the dirt and germs first. It is one of the cleaning basics you should probably know.
- People often dump the grease and oil directly in the sink that congeals in sink pipes. Gradually it decomposes, which leads to rotten smells.
- Do not forget about the garbage disposal! It is one of the main reasons behind the bad drain smell. Sure, help to get rid of garbage leftovers and certainly requires deep cleaning once in a while.

What Causes A Smelly Bathroom Drain?

The following two reasons are responsible for the bad smell in your bathroom drain.

- Hair and soap scum are examples of debris that can become stuck in your drain and harden into grease. They not only clog your drain but also probably smell weird.
- Actually, the U-shaped pipe that runs beneath the majority of sinks and has a little bit of water in it prevents foul sewer fumes from getting into your house.

Supplies To Clean A Drain And Remove Smell

- A gentle but effective dish soap
- Your favourite sponge/scrubber
- Plungers for Kitchen and/or bathroom

How To Remove Smell From Kitchen Drain

Try the following ways to clean your sink and drain, which will remove the bad smell.

- Utilise a sink stopper, scrub the sink with dish soap and wash with hot water.
- After soaking, give the entire area a thorough scrub, including the faucet and the area around the sink.
- Remove whatever debris you observe. You may even use an old toothbrush on the tiniest crevices if you feel there is a requirement.
- If the surface is too dirty to clean on your own, contact trained end of lease cleaners in Sydney, New South Wales. Avoiding sink cleaning is one of the cleaning mistakes that are making your home dirtier.

If The Smells Are Still Present, Move On To The Drain

- While it may be tempting to use a store-bought drain cleaner to address your issue quickly, most plumbers will advise against doing so. It is because these products have harsh chemicals, which can cause harm to the pipes and lead to longer-term problems. So you only use natural products and methods.
- Remove any food scraps or trash that may be stuck in the garbage disposal or drain. Make sure to unplug the garbage disposal first to avoid the possibility of electric shock or other accidents.
- To soften the blockage, slowly pour or run hot water down the drain. You can use a tea kettle to pour boiling water.
- Dish soap should then be used to remove oily build-ups in the drain.
- Repeat the following steps using a kitchen plunger if the drain is still plugged.
- Drain still smells bad? To remove the odour, toss some citrus peels into the garbage disposal and run it. Any food particles clinging to the blades can be removed from the disposal by running it while filled with ice cubes.

How To Remove Smell From Bathroom Drain

The following ways will help you a lot to eliminate the bad smell from the bathroom drain.

- Start with the sink clean-up.
- Utilise a sink stopper and fill the sink with hot water and dish soap that has a grease-cutting formula.
- After soaking, give the entire area a thorough scrub, including the faucet and the area around the sink. Remove any obvious gunk. Get rid of all the toothpaste smears, makeup particles and lotion spills.
- Search and remove any loose material in the drain.
- Pour dish soap and nearly boiling water down the drain.
- If necessary, use a plunger and repeat the process.

Drain smells is a common problem for household, but that doesn't mean you have to live with it. Try the aforementioned ways to eliminate the drain smell in the best possible manner and use chemical-free methods to ensure indoor air-quality is safe.

If you need professional help, contact a company that offers reliable end of lease cleaning in Sydney. You can expect to get a flawless result.
