

WHAT SHOULD YOU KNOW ABOUT STOMACH CANCER?

Causes and Symptoms

Stomach Cancer

Digestive cancer, including stomach cancer, is a serious condition that requires prompt medical attention.

How does it happen?

Stomach cancer occurs when the cells lining the stomach begin to grow abnormally, forming a tumor.

Causes of stomach cancer:

The exact cause is unclear, but factors like family history, chronic stomach inflammation, smoking, a diet high in smoked, pickled, or salted foods, and Helicobacter pylori bacterial infection can increase the risk of developing it.

Symptoms:

- Persistent abdominal pain or discomfort
- Nausea and vomiting
- Loss of appetite
- Difficulty swallowing
- Fatigue
- Unexplained weight loss
- Blood in the stool
- Feeling full after eating a small amount of food

Treatment:

- Stomach cancer treatment depends on cancer's stage and location.
- It may involve surgery to remove a portion or all of the stomach and chemotherapy or radiation therapy
