Reasons to visit New South Wales, Australia

Overwhelmed by where to start your travel adventure in Australia? Six reasons why the gorgeous, Southeastern state of New South Wales should be your first stop.

Australia always intrigues travelers with its dynamic cities, picturesque beaches, vibrant English dialects, incredible nature, and interesting wildlife. But the country is so huge that many travelers don't even know where to start. The Outback? The National Parks of Western Australia? The Great Barrier Reef? The rainforest? The wine regions? Or the big cities, like Sydney, Melbourne, Perth, and Brisbane?

With so much diverse landscape to choose from, Australia can seem overwhelming. But having spent the last seven months in this country, I can strongly recommend the gorgeous state of New South Wales as a great starting point.

Six reasons to visit New South Wales, Australia

❖ The chance to explore Sydney

Though Sydney is not the capital of Australia (surprise! Canberra is), it is still one of the world's most famous cities. Starting your Australian adventure here is a wise decision, partly due to the cheap airfare.

Because Sydney is such a huge international travel hub, you can find many decently-priced flights that land in Sydney, so it's easy to enter the country from here. There are also plenty of backpacker hostels where you can live and work and have so much fun at the beginning of your stay. (For a complete list of work exchange, social and eco opportunities, check out the Worldpackers work in Australia page).

Not only is Sydney convenient as an entry point, it's also full of vibrant city life that makes for such an exciting cultural experience. There are tons of art museums, famous landmarks and monuments, fun bars, clubs, restaurants, and of course, beautiful beaches.

Sydney unites city life with beach life, which gives the area a relaxing atmosphere despite the skyscrapers and traffic. The Bondi to Coogee Coastal Walk is a famous walking trail along Sydney's east coast that brings you to countless amazing beaches with turquoise water, so this is a must-do activity when visiting Sydney.

❖ The thriving beach culture

Australia has thousands of beaches, and you can find a good amount of them in New South Wales. Start with the famous Sydney beaches, like Bondi, Tamarama, and Bronte Beach, then head either south or north to find even more gorgeous stretches of sand and Pacific Ocean. New South Wales is also home to Hyams Beach, located in Jervis Bay. This beach is known for having some of the whitest sand in the world, and it really does live up to its expectations.

Whether you visit a giant beach crowded with tourists or a tiny, isolated beach in a small town, beach culture is a huge part of Australian life. From surfers riding the waves to kids playing in the sand to people enjoying fetch with their dogs, the beach is the center of life in New South Wales. You can swim, surf, paddle-board, kayak, snorkel, fish, dive, or relax on the sand. People go the beach to clear their heads, to exercise in the sunshine, or to meet up with friends and family. It's truly amazing to see how central the beach is to life and culture in New South Wales, so be sure to fit many beach days into your time in Australia.

❖ Many hiking opportunities

For those who love living an active lifestyle, Australia is the perfect country to visit. New South Wales in particular has perfect weather for hiking year-round, with hot sunny summers and cool, brisk winters. Along the coast, there are plenty of options to hike oceanside and get great exercise.

Two great coastal walks can be found south of Sydney in Kiama, and go from from Wollongong to Thirroul. These walks are pretty easy-to-moderate, and boast incredible coastal views and accessibility so you can stop and swim along the way.

You can also venture inland to find hiking in the bush, forest, and mountains. Some beautiful places to hike include the Blue Mountains, the Illawarra Escarpment and the Southern Highlands. All of these places can be reached by train from Sydney, and you can find challenging climbs as well as relaxing walks alongside waterfalls and swimming holes.

❖ Countless national parks

There are even more wonderful hiking opportunities in the many national parks scattered throughout New South Wales. Australia does a great job of preserving and protecting its wildlife, and the country is just thriving with natural beauty.

National Parks are perfect places to get in touch with the magnificent Australian outdoors, whether through camping, swimming, hiking, taking photos, or simply immersing yourself in nature.

A favorite among travelers is Royal National Park, located just south of Sydney. Here you can find secluded beaches and surf spots, cliff-jumping spots and waterfalls, and towering, rugged rock-faces along the coastline.

In other various national parks throughout New South Wales, you can wander among towering gum trees and eucalyptus trees, and soak in the richness and vitality of Australian wilderness.

❖ Interesting wildlife

In the Australian wilderness, you are certain to stumble across some of the country's famous wildlife. Kangaroos, wallabies, koalas, echidnas, wombats, and countless birds, lizards and insects roam the countryside peacefully, and they are all amazing creatures to see in person. You'll often see animal crossing signs on the roads with these animals pictured, as they are really just common animals to the locals. But, as a traveler, you won't be able to help but feel excited to see a kangaroo hopping around for the first time.

Even in cities, you can catch a glimpse of the colorful parrots, macaws, and cockatoos that live in Australia. They'll fly right up to you to stare longingly at your food, or they'll wake you up in the morning with their loud bird calls.

As you've probably heard, the country does have some dangerous and poisonous animals, but they usually don't appear unless you're deep in the forest or outback. A good rule-of-thumb is to always be mindful when wandering through the bush, and always be respectful to any local animals you come across.

❖ The friendly, welcoming Australian vibe

The classic phrase "G'day Mate" pretty much sums up the Australian vibe. Generally speaking, most Aussies are genuine, laid-back, and friendly, and are happy to show tourists a good time and introduce them to their beautiful country.

While Sydney tends to be full of tourists, if you venture out of the city along the South Coast you will meet many locals. Most all of them will be more than happy to show you around and do anything they can to ensure you are having a positive and memorable experience in their beautiful country.

I recommend trying to hang out with Aussies as much as you can. Take surf lessons with them, have classic outdoor barbecues with them, grab morning coffees in trendy cafés with them, and split packets of Tim-tams with them. (Tim tams are a traditional Aussie chocolate sandwich cookie, and they are delicious!) Oh, and the rumor is true — Aussies love to shorten and abbreviate all words. It's hilarious and fun to listen to!

Local Australians are always eager to strike up a conversation and see how your day is going. Their relaxed, positive and welcoming nature makes Australia a truly enjoyable place to be.

3. What Makes A Sydney Tourist Attraction?

As Australia's largest city, Sydney is often the first stop for travellers taking a trip down-under. With a unique blend of impressive skyline, picturesque harbour, iconic architecture and stretches of golden beaches, it's no wonder that Sydney's been hailed as one of the world's most beautiful cities.

A vibrant destination that is both buzzing with high energy and effortlessly chilled out, you'll have an unforgettable time discovering the different sides of the city. So if this is your first time in Sydney, check out these must-do activities to get your trip started!

→ For Animal Lovers

Being home to some of the most loved (and feared) creatures, Australia's wildlife is certainly unique to the rest of the world. If you're looking to get up close and personal to some of these native animals, then just a short walk from Darling Harbour is the Sydney Wildlife Zoo where you can enjoy the Australian outback in the heart of the city. Here, you'll have the unforgettable opportunity to cuddle koalas, hand feed kangaroos and come face to face with Tasmanian devils whilst learning about their habits from informative and passionate staff. If you dare, step into the Nightfall Habitat and discover some of the weird and wonderful creatures that only come out after dark or explore the Gum Tree Valley habitat and meet two of the world's deadliest snakes.

Also situated by Darling Harbour is the Sydney Sealife Aquarium where you can immerse yourself in the magical world under the sea and discover the wonder of The Great Barrier Reef. You'll be sure to find something that captivates you whilst walking through these fascinating marine exhibits, from immense tanks of kaleidoscopic tropical fish to neon jellyfish pools. One of the must-see highlights are the long transparent tunnels where huge reef sharks and stingrays swim right overhead! The aquarium is also a fantastic place for families, and kids can enjoy a hands-on learning experience in the touch rock pools and even feel live starfish.

→ For Thrill Seekers

If you want to inject a dose of adrenaline into your trip and don't struggle with heights, then the Sydney Harbour Bridge climb is the ideal activity for you. Step by step you'll ascend the arch of one of Sydney's most iconic landmarks as you absorb spectacular 360 degree views of the harbour. Once you reach the thrilling 134 meter height of the summit, you can enjoy an uninterrupted panorama of the city and of course have your photo taken against the beautiful backdrop. If you're nervous about climb, the experienced and patient guides will put you at ease right away and entertain you with stories of the bridge throughout the ascent.

As this activity is carried out with the highest levels of safety and includes an equipment prep before you start climbing, you'll have nothing to worry about as you embark in this unique and exhilarating adventure.

→ For Culture Vultures

For anyone who wants to get a sense of Sydney's past then a walk through the Rocks will feel like going back in time. As the area where the first European settlers stepped ashore, this historic quarter is seen as the birthplace of modern Sydney. Over the last two centuries it's transformed from a rough and rowdy neighbourhood of sailors, convicts and gangs into a creative and cultural hub lined with funky bars, delicious food stalls and boutique shops. This area is also home to Sydney's oldest pubs such as Lord Nelson and Fortune of War, so if you're interested in savouring all the Rocks' many watering holes then why not check out The Great Pub Challenge for full details. If you've explored the area and the inner history buff in you still isn't satisfied, then join the free walking tour that takes place every evening at 6pm where you'll explore the charming cobbled streets, colonial buildings and learn stories about the area's vibrant past.

→ For Beach Bums

With over 100 beaches located in and around the city, you'd be mad not to visit a few of Sydney's golden beaches. As a go-to spot for locals and tourists to relax, work out and socialise, Bondi Beach is a great place to soak up Sydney's lively atmosphere and vibrant beach culture. It's world-famous status also means it's a magnet for huge crowds but at 1km long, there's enough space (albeit cramped) for everyone.

Manly Beach located in northern Sydney is another local favourite. Flanked by tree-lined cliffs and with 2 extensive beaches it's a much quieter alternative to Bondi. The 20-minute Manly Ferry that leaves from Circular Quay makes for an impressive ride in itself as it sails through the picturesque harbour and offers magnificent views of the Sydney Opera House. At the beach, bask in the sun after a refreshing swim or watch surfers ride the glittering waves as you wiggle your toes in the soft golden sand. The waters at Manly provide ideal conditions for surfing and the Manly Surf School, voted the No. 1 surf school in New South Wales is the place to be for any aspiring surfer. The school runs daily classes open to all ages and abilities as well as private sessions, so grab a board and get involved in this fun-filled Aussie sport!

4. What Are The Iconic Attractions In Sydney?

From iconic architectural wonders like the Opera House to coastal walks and stretches of beautiful beaches, Sydney offers a wide array of landmarks that need to be on your list to visit.

Sydney, the vibrant capital city of New South Wales in Australia, is a melting pot of cultures, history, and stunning natural beauty. Let's explore some of the must-see landmarks in Sydney!

❖ The Sydney Opera House

📍 Bennelong Point, Sydney

The Sydney Opera House is an architectural masterpiece that has become the symbol of Sydney and Australia. Designed by Danish architect Jørn Utzon, this iconic landmark in Sydney is known for its distinctive sail-shaped roofs. As impressive as it is from the outside, you can also visit the inside.

Either book a ticket to the various performing arts events, including opera, ballet, theater, and music concerts or get an insider's perspective as you go behind the scenes with this Opera House Backstage Tour.

A visit to this city is incomplete without admiring (and getting that Insta snap!) the stunning beauty of this iconic Sydney landmark – the Sydney Opera House.

❖ Sydney Harbour Bridge

Another iconic landmark that you have surely heard about before is the Sydney Harbour Bridge, often referred to as the “Coathanger” by the locals. This impressive steel arch bridge spans across Sydney Harbour, connecting the central business district with the North Shore.

You can walk or bike over the bridge or if you're feeling extra adventurous, you can climb the bridge's arch for breathtaking panoramic views of the city.

To truly experience the magnificence of Sydney Harbour and the Opera House, there's nothing quite like embarking on a helicopter tour of Sydney.

❖ Bondi Beach

📍 Bondi, Sydney

Bondi Beach is one of Australia's most famous beaches and a popular destination for locals and tourists seeking sun, surf, and a vibrant beachside atmosphere. This iconic stretch of golden sand offers excellent swimming and surfing opportunities.

One of my favourite thing to do is taking the coastal walk from Bondi to Coogee to enjoy stunning views of the Pacific Ocean and encounter other beautiful beaches along the way. There are also plenty of great cafes and little boutiques along the Bondi Beach beachfront that are worth browsing. Drop in at Bondi Icebergs for a drink where you'll arguably get the best views in all of Sydney.

❖ The Rock

📍 The Rocks neighbourhood, in the heart of Sydney

The Rocks is a historic neighbourhood nestled at the foot of the Sydney Harbour Bridge. It is the birthplace of modern Sydney and is known for its lovely cobblestone streets, colonial-era buildings, and charming pubs. Explore the lively weekend markets, visit the Museum of Contemporary Art, and delve into the neighbourhood's rich history by taking a guided walking tour.

When it comes to finding the best place to stay in Sydney, I always recommend The Rocks, as the area has some top-notch hotels. Most of the luxurious accommodation options boasts stunning harbour and Opera House views while being located in a prime location in the heart of the city with easy access to all Sydney landmarks.

❖ Royal Botanic Garden

📍 5 minutes from the Sydney CBD

Situated in the heart of the city just next to the Opera House, the Royal Botanic Garden offers a peaceful oasis amidst the urban hustle and bustle. This expansive garden showcases a vast collection of plants, flowers, and trees, including some rare and endangered species.

Enjoy a picnic on the lush lawns, take a guided tour, or simply unwind and soak in the natural beauty surrounding you. Head to my favourite spot, Mrs Macquarie's Chair for a picturesque view of the harbour, Opera House and Sydney Harbour Bridge.

❖ Taronga Zoo

📍 Mosman, North Sydney

For a unique wildlife experience, visit Taronga Zoo. Located on the shores of Sydney Harbour, this renowned zoo is home to a diverse range of animals from Australia and around the world. I recommend visiting some of the exhibits, such as the Australian Walkabout where you walk among wallabies, koalas and the happiest animal in the world, the quokka. Head to the giraffe encounter, with the Sydney Harbour Bridge and City Skyline at its backdrop, it's a sight you'll surely never forget!

❖ Sydney Tower Eye

📍 Westfield Sydney in the Sydney CBD

For panoramic views of Sydney, head to the Sydney Tower Eye, the city's tallest structure, making it an iconic Sydney landmark.

From the observation deck, you can enjoy 360-degree views of the city skyline, the Sydney Harbour, and beyond. For an extra thrill, try the Skywalk, a glass-floor viewing platform that extends outside the tower, allowing you to see the city from a whole new perspective.

9. Darling Harbour

📍 Sydney CBD

Darling Harbour is a vibrant waterfront precinct filled with entertainment, dining and leisure activities. This bustling area offers something for everyone but is especially family-friendly. Visit the SEA LIFE Sydney Aquarium to marvel at marine life, explore the interactive exhibits at the Australian National Maritime Museum, or catch a movie at the world's biggest screen at the IMAX Theatre (Note: it's currently being rebuilt!).

I love all the waterfront restaurants in Darling Harbour, perfect for a sunset drink and dinner and a leisurely stroll along the promenade to soak up the lively atmosphere afterward.

Allow me to also reveal a hidden gem in this area: the Chinese Garden of Friendship. In this tranquil oasis amidst towering skyscrapers, you'll find shimmering koi ponds, cascading waterfalls, and a peaceful ambiance. The best part? Entry to this serene haven is completely free.

5. Awesome Reasons To Visit In Sydney

For a person that's been nomadic for the last year and doesn't really know if "home" will ever be one place, this is a rare sentence I'm about to utter. Sydney is a city I would live in. I know, it doesn't seem so surprising, but the desire to put down roots is an odd feeling for me, so I thought it best to acknowledge.

So what do I love so much about Sydney? Well, there's quite a few things on that list. It's got great food, stunning scenic views, the beach AND the city within a manageable radius, a multicultural population from all over the world and pretty great weather year round – what more could you want? If you haven't already visited this Australian city, I highly recommend putting it on your list ASAP. And just to convince you even further, here are 13 reasons why.

ONE OF THE MOST SCENIC COASTAL WALKS IN THE WORLD

The Bondi to Coogee walk is a 6km path that sits up on the cliffs of Sydney's stunning coast for anyone to enjoy — and both tourists and locals take equal advantage. It was my favorite thing I did over the course of three weeks in the city, and I practically dedicated a whole day to it, stopping often for pictures and breaking for lunch along Bondi Beach before doing the walk back home all over again.

Most people only do it in one direction, but I loved seeing how the scenery changed between mid-day and golden hour. With that said, it can be quite an endeavor to do the whole walk in the heat, so I recommend picking morning or afternoon when the temperature cools off a bit.

A BRUNCH CULTURE TO DIE FOR

Australians do not mess around when it comes to their “brekkie,” and typical breakfast food seems to be served all day at many of Sydney's most beloved establishments. The best part is that while the food is so tasty, it's also so much healthier than your standard American diner fare. You won't find a plethora of pancakes, croissants and bacon strips on the menus here.

Rather, expect for every spot to put their own twist on “avo smash” and serve up a healthy dose of açai bowls and eggs with dukkah. My favorite brunch spots while in Sydney were Porch and Parlour, Shuk, and Sadhana Kitchen. The only downside: brunch can easily cost $40 after you've thrown a fresh pressed juice or flat white into the mix.

THE ICONIC OPERA HOUSE

Witnessing this architectural beauty is reason alone to make a stop in Sydney — and it's easy to get an epic view from a multitude of spots around the harbour. Of course getting up close and personal is a must (as is a cocktail at the famed Opera Bar next door), but I also enjoyed the views of the Opera House from the Royal Botanical Gardens and by ferry. Next time I visit Sydney, I'll definitely be checking out the Opera House performance schedule ahead of time and booking tickets for a show to get the full experience.

A GORGEOUS NEW TAP ROOM JUST CAME INTO TOWN

Most breweries seem to follow a certain theme: masculine, industrial, probably heavy on the metal and wooden accents, rustic. Ya feel me? Well, let the new Endeavor TapRooms totally blow your mind. I happened to stumble upon this gem during a self-led walking tour of the famous Rocks district, and seriously never wanted to leave. Welcome to my brewery of dreams.

ARCHITECTURE THAT WILL SURPRISE YOU

Before visiting Sydney, I imagined it as a super modern city. Not to the futuristic scale of places like Dubai and Singapore, but I just didn't imagine that the gorgeous old-world architecture you find in Europe would exist here. However, I was very quickly proven wrong as on many occasions while exploring Sydney's CBD, I felt instantly transported to London or Paris.

THE MOST EPIC FIREWORKS IN THE WORLD

I was lucky enough to spend New Year's Eve in Sydney to ring in 2017, but the last day of the year isn't the only time you can catch the city's world-famous fireworks. Next time you're planning a visit, make sure to check the Darling Harbour schedule to see what events or holidays are upcoming, as it's not a rare occurrence to catch a spontaneous Saturday night fireworks show here.
