

Yard Waste Removal in 4 Steps

If you have a yard, you probably want to make it look as nice as possible. Your yard is the first thing people see when they come to your home, and if it is full of junk, clutter, and yard waste, it won't seem very presentable. After you have cleaned up your yard, you probably have a lot of waste that needs to be removed. You can get it done in four simple steps.

1. Large Debris

The first step is to sort through all the debris. If you have trees that have fallen or unsightly stumps, you need to have them hauled away. Get the big things out of the way first so you can see the other things and have room to work. If the debris is too heavy for you to lift, wait until a waste removal company can come help you with it.

2. Sticks and Limbs

Smaller sticks and limbs can be just as annoying to deal with as large debris. Gather all the sticks and put them in a waste bin or wheelbarrow so a yard waste removal company can easily take them off your hands. You can also rent a waste bin and toss all the stick and limbs into it. Later, it can be hauled away.

3. Leaves

If you have trees in your yard or nearby, you probably have leaves that you need to get rid of. You can hire a yard debris removal company to come get all the old dead leaves from your yard, so you can see your beautiful lawn. You can bag the leaves up and toss them in a bin or the back of a truck and have them all hauled away.

4. Storm Debris

When storms hit, they can wreak havoc on your yard. You can find downed trees, branches, plants, and all sorts of things that have blown in with the storm. Don't stress about it; they can all be removed quickly and easily. Storm debris can be heavy and dangerous. You don't know where it came from or what it could be contaminated with. Always wear gloves when handling storm debris.
